Strength of purpose, strength of product and strength of commitment shaped the design cornerstones for this Yorkshire-based property developer's total refurbishment.

This informed every element of Staverton's specification with stunning results.

Corporate Developer: Project Profile

Staverton's design team felt that incorporating a bold two-colour landscape into the space would fit the brief perfectly.

We specified a selection of executive bespoke furniture in the form of solid, slab-sided executive desking finished in dark wood wengi and complimented with porcelain high gloss storage options.

The colours were then inverted for the administrative desks and storage, creating an overall look that conveyed these values instantly and convincingly.

The client did not want to buy into traditional office product as the concepts of change, movement and new beginnings formed such an integral part of their business and their company philosophy.

To meet this objective, Staverton specified standalone tables with tooled modesty panels for staff rather than the more traditional option of multi-person benching systems.

The addition of personal chrome-handled storagewalls allowed for the creation of individual and unique office stations.

The project was completed with leading ergonomic products including Humanscale's Liberty chair, desk lighting and computer arms to further demonstrate the underlying idea of inherent and visible strength through design.
